University of Chicago Law School Magazine Writes About Firm and Partner Stephanie Scharf

Partner Stephanie Scharf, has been featured in the University of Chicago Law School Online Magazine for the innovations she has brought to the practice of law and for advocating for the advancement of women in the law. With both a law degree and doctorate from the University of Chicago, Stephanie explained the University’s influence on her own career, especially its interdisciplinary approach to solving problems and its respect for innovation, whatever the source. She has tried to translate those values into the growth of Scharf Banks Marmor: “We are bringing on great talent, enjoying the luxury that a small firm has to hire experienced lawyers. Technology enables us to work more efficiently, minimize layers, and partner effectively with other firms to staff some larger projects, We will only grow as fast as we can retain our core values.” To read the full article, please click here.
