

“Advice and counsel that is concise, timely,
on-point and cost-effective.”

Partner Sarah Marmor Quoted in Reader About Abuses at a Chicago Theater

Chicago newspaper, The Reader, has published a penetrating investigative report about abuses at Profiles Theatre in Chicago, including claims of workplace harassment and violence. Partner Sarah Marmor, has been providing pro bono representation to four of the women referenced in the article, and that work is acknowledged by The Reader along with a statement from Ms. Marmor: "Sara, Benson, Kim, and Allie all receive pro bono legal representation from attorney Sarah Marmor, a partner at the Chicago firm Scharf Banks Marmor. 'We have seen a lot in the news about how far behind the creative world can be on these issues,'" she says in a statement, "'and hopefully the impact of so many women and men coming forward in this matter, as well as the other high-profile stories we have seen in the last year, will be positive change and real, enforceable rules that make creative spaces a little safer.'" For the complete article, click here.